

RICH CLUBMEN OFFER REWARD.

They Will Add $1,000 to the $1,000 County Is Expected to Offer for Arrest of John Heffernan's Slayer.

AUTHORITIES ALL AT SEA.

Ardley Victim Possibly Mistaken for Wealthy Resident, but There Are Suspicions that Motive May Have Been Jealousy.

Members of the wealthy colony of New Yorkers who have mansions around the Ardley Country Club and at Irvington-on-the-Hudson are so aroused over the mysterious murder of John Heffernan near the Ardley Club railroad station on Sunday night and the failure of the police to capture the murderer that they decided today to employ private detectives to run down the slayer.

Rich clubmen will also offer a reward of $1,000 for the capture of the assassin in addition to another $1,000 which the county will probably offer.

The fact that the murderer, who was bareheaded, was enabled to escape over the private estates of millionaires, where there are many ferocious dogs and private watchmen on guard, is looked upon in amazement. No one saw a stranger in the neighborhood of the club or on the Albany Post road, and it is now believed the murderer escaped in a rowboat or sailboat, which could have been anchored in the Hudson at the dock in front of Robert Hewitt's estate, Rio Vista; the wall fronting on Nevla, the estate of Gen. Philip Schuyler, near by.

Came from Direction of Dock.

Miss Sarah Campbell, who was Heffernan's companion, says the man came from the direction of Mr. Hewitt's dock and crossed the New York Central tracks to where they were sitting. This bears out the theory about the murderer using a boat.

Coroner Russell will hold the inquest at the Irvington Town Hall to-night, when Miss Campbell will be carefully cross-examined. Every effort will be made to have her tell all she knows about the crime.

After the shooting Sarah Campbell uttered no outcry, but ran back to the station and was boarding a train for Tarrytown when she was stopped. When Heffernan was taken to the station and confronted by the woman he said:

Victim's Queer Statement.

"Sarah, if you had helped me I would not have been shot."

To members of the club who questioned him before he died, Heffernan said:

"I don't know the man who shot me. He was a stranger, but I think I know who he was."

"Yes, I know this man's name, but I cannot tell it."

"No, I will not tell his name. I must not."

From these utterances of Heffernan the police and the club members interested in the capture of the murderer do not believe that the woman has told all she knows.

FIREMEN OVERCOME AT TENEMENT FIRE.

Gallant Rescues at No. 231 East Seventy-third Street by Special Officer Louis Snisek.

A fire which threatened to destroy the five-story tenement at No. 231 East Seventy-third street, started on the third floor to-day.

There was no one in the apartment at the time the fire started and the windows and doors were all closed. The flames had gained considerable headway and had spread to all the rooms before the fire was discovered.

Louis Snisek, a special officer, saw the blaze. After turning in an alarm he rushed to the third floor. In the rooms across the hall from the blaze he found a woman and three children. The woman did not understand English and appeared to be too frightened to move. Pushing the woman in front of him Snisek carried the children downstairs to the street. He then went back and helped other persons out.

Thomas O'Keefe, who lived on the fourth floor, had climbed out on the front window sill of his home when the firemen arrived, and appeared as if making ready to jump. The firemen shouted to him to wait and an extension ladder was run up to the floor.

As he was passing the third floor with his semi-conscious burden the firemen saw the flames coming out of the windows across the ladder. The hair of both was singed.

Henry, of Engine Company 44, saw Lieut. Rich, of Engine 39, reel and fall, having been partially overcome by smoke. Capt. Hennessy dragged the fainting man to the window and turned a stream of water on him. This revived Rich somewhat and he was taken to the street.

NEW YORK GIRL WHOSE VOICE IN THE CHOIR WON BARON'S HEART.

BARON WON BY HER FINE VOICE.

The Romantic Wooing of Young Austrian Nobleman, Who Takes to Wife the Daughter of a Dressmaker.

The custom of foreign noblemen seeking for New York heiresses has been reversed by Baron George Augustus de Focke, of Vienna, who, by the way, is wealthy. This young man is now on his way to Paris with a New York bride who is not an heiress. Previous to her marriage last Wednesday she was Adelaide Anna Cox, the daughter of Hon. Mrs. Cox, a well-to-do dressmaker of No. 64 Lexington avenue.

He Has No Business Talent.

The Baron is twenty-six years old, more than six feet tall, blonde and muscular. He has travelled all over the world and speaks English with as fine a finish as an American. At the age of fifteen he inherited a great fortune.

Coming to New York after a long tour of the United States last January, the Baron engaged quarters at the Waldorf-Astoria. Although he had been in New York before he was almost an absolute stranger and the first Sunday after his arrival he strolled up Fifth avenue to St. Patrick's Cathedral.

The Vision of the Cathedral.

Impressed by the magnificent appearance of the structure he entered and was escorted to a seat. It was during the celebration of the mass. In the harmony of the choir one voice appealed. The Count glanced up and standing at the rail he saw a girl all in white with copper-colored hair, big blue eyes and rosy cheeks. She was singing. This was Adelaide Anna Cox.

To make her acquaintance was his next move. He looked through his letters of introduction and found one to a prominent clergyman of the Episcopal Church. It was presented the very next day and the young man explained his predicament to the clergyman, who gave him a letter to a priest connected with the Cathedral. Through this priest the Baron George Augustus de Focke was formally presented to Miss Adelaide Anna Cox.

PLANS FOR THE NEW WANAMAKER STORE.

Great Structure Is to Cost $3,100,000 and Will Be Fourteen Stories High.

Plans for the new retail store that is to be erected for John Wanamaker on the block just south of his present stores have been submitted to Building Superintendent Thompson by D. H. Burnham & Co., architects, of Chicago and New York.

The plans comprise a set of sixty-two large drawings in colors, setting out in minute detail the elaborate exterior and interior decorative work, and a very complete system of electric lighting, which is to be one of the features of the new building. They show that the structure will be fourteen stories in height, rising 217-1/2 feet above the curb level, fronting on Broadway 188 feet 2-1/4 inches, 187 feet 10 inches on Fourth avenue, 371-1/2 feet on Ninth street and 339 feet on Eighth street.

On the second floor there will be a large music hall for the entertainment of visitors. The facade will be Bedford stone for the first three stories and ornamental terra cotta for the eleven upper stories, and there will be exterior fire-escapes of ornamental iron. All the elevators will be of fire-proof construction, and there will be installed a complete fire extinguishing apparatus.

The building is to cost $3,100,000, and the specifications accompanying the drawings state that the construction work is to be under the supervision of W. L. Lewis as superintendent.

STOLE TO AID A DYING WIFE.

Two Young Men Win Liberty When Brought Out for Sentence Before Judge Moore by Telling the Truth.

FOSTER NOT SO LUCKY.

He Robbed Many Houses at Richmond Hill, and with Edward K. Borland, a Bigamist, Is Sentenced to Sing Sing Prison.

Judge Moore, in the Queens County Court, had three unusual cases on his calendar to-day, in which he exercised the full discretion allowed him under the criminal statutes.

The first prisoners brought before him were John Miller and Isador Baumgarten, of Hopkins street, Brooklyn. Both were convicted of burglary, and could be sentenced to ten years in Sing Sing at hard labor. When they were led up to the bar Baumgarten said:

"Your Honor, we committed this crime. We confess that, but we did it to aid Miller's dying wife and his starving children. That is all we have to offer in our defense."

Judge Moore looked intently into the faces of the two men and then said, slowly:

Lets Them Go with a Warning.

"I believe you. Though I could send you to jail for a long time I am not going to do it. I will suspend sentence. But hereafter appeal for aid when in distress and do not steal."

The next prisoner brought up was nineteen-year-old Sydney Foster, convicted of a series of burglaries in Richmond Hill, where his mother occupies a handsome residence.

"There is no excuse for you," said Judge Moore to the boy. "You were brought up in luxury and surrounded by the best influences. You only committed crime to satisfy your vicious desires. I will sentence you to not more than three and not less than two years in Sing Sing."

The boy displayed no emotion, merely curling his lip in a sneer.

Edward K. Borland, a well-to-do drug manufacturer thirty years old, was brought up charged with bigamy. His first wife, who was Lillian Fox, of Yonkers, sat well forward in the courtroom. Her eyes blazed with scorn. Beside her sat her mother, who had acted as a detective in discovering Borland's second marriage to Emily Buscher, of Corona, L. I. It possible her bearing was more severe toward the prisoner than her daughter's.

Second Wife in Tears.

The second wife sat away to the rear of the courtroom and sobbed throughout the proceedings. She is young and very pretty.

Borland, who is fine looking, tall and well dressed, started to tell the Court he thought he had been divorced from his first wife when he married the second time, when Judge Moore interrupted:

"Look here, my fine man, you may be able to fool the girls, but you can't fool me. You have wilfully brought sorrow and ruin into the lives of two women. I will sentence you to not less than two years and not more than three years in Sing Sing at hard labor."

The Court laid particular stress on "hard labor," directing his gaze at the soft, womanlike hands of the prisoner.

MUST GET TWO BONDS.

Station-House Bail Will Not Do If a Case Is Continued.

It will cost twice as much hereafter to secure the services of a professional bondsman in cases where a continuance after appearance may be desirable. It has been the custom in the Magistrate's Court to continue station-house bonds in misdemeanor cases which were not at once disposed of.

District Attorney Jerome has sent to the Board of Magistrates a letter saying that station-house bonds in misdemeanor cases are worthless in court. That means, of course, that where a continuance is granted a new bond must be filed and the professional bondsmen will be sure to exact a new fee.

A REMARKABLE CASE.
